SIX D LLARS PER ANNUM-IN ADVANCE.

EVENING. APRIL 29, 1878 Man BE HER INTERRUPPED .- At the Plymouth prayer meeting, Friday night, Mr. Beecher spoke of the real meaning of conversion. In the course of his remarks he said: - The question for at y man-when he answers it truly he is a hristian from that time-is this: Will you mak your life amenable to Christ's commands will you be his subject in this life." will you be his subject in this life."

Here a woman who had been sitting quietly on the first row, directly in front of Mr Beecher, leaned torward and said in a loud, ex cited tone, "Will you let a woman answer it?"

Mr Beecher:—"When I get through you may if it is proper."

He are disconcerted, for a moment by the un-Oundeele 1 00 p.m. 10 30 p m. 10 32 ".

He was disconcerted for a moment by the unexpec ed interruption, and there was a whisper ed m .rmur of surprise throughout the room-Many person, who were near at hand tried to get a glim, se of the woman She was gressed plainly but reatly in black, with a black bonnet. She was of swarthy complexion, with dark hair, full face and strongly marked features.

Mr. Bee her closed his address, and at once gave out the hymn. The strange woman's next neighbor—2 fat, amiable looking woman—of-fered er a hymn book, but the offer was re-pulsed with a nod and a sneer. When the ser-vices were ended the strange woman put on her waterproof cloak and overshoes, stepped up to the official stenographer and asked him about the time of services on Sunday. She glared about for a moment and then said rapidly: "He has crucified me to-night, but my time will soon come to speak. He must hear me then. The come to speak. He must hear me then. The day is at hand of him who is born of woman."

She then passed out unattended. The general opinion of those present was that she was insane. She crossed over Fulton Ferry. On the New York side she was joined by a large, thick-set man, with full black beard, whose face was partially concealed by a slouch hat. The couple crossed over the Courtland street ferry to Jersey City.—N. Y. News.
